About the Author

Gavin Lihou is a country boy at heart, raised in sunny Wagga Wagga, Australia. He is a Primary School Teacher with many years of experience behind the chalkboard, spending endless hours reading thousands of children's books to his classes, listening to what makes them laugh, cry, respond positively to, enjoy, want to read more and what may be needed to help children form richer experiences with the books they read.

Gavin, who is a graduate of the Australian College of Journalism (Children's Writing) – Sydney, has been working on many projects, Revenge of the Cannibal Chickens being his most recent. His unique ability to use humour, wit, pun and word play has resulted in an exciting read for children which will make them hungry for more.

What People Are Saying About Revenge of the Cannibal Chickens.

"I thought the book was fantastic and I did a lot of laughing. So again, thanks, and keep up with your writing."

Rob Ballantyne

"Nothing I like better than chooks with attitude! What a great read, full of wit and humour, and a real page turner. I could easily see this on the screen. Top work."

Matt Brown

"Whether you're a spring chicken or an old duck, this book is sure to have you cackleberrying out loud! Full of eggcellent puns, just like the author himself, it's well worth taking the time to read. It's two sunny sides up from me!"

Melissa Rogers

"I'm sixty years old soon to be a grandad. I haven't read a kids book for I don't know how many years. But this is one story I'll definitely be reading to my grandchild. A good fun read"

Philip Fitzgerald-Holmes

"I have been reading Cannibal Chickens to my granddaughter. I don't know who laughs more my granddaughter or me. A great read for young and old."

Paul Andrea

"Absolutely hilarious, fun and full of wit. A pun-tastic, action packed book that's good for the young and old alike. Don't miss it."
